

p. 204, ex. 3, B

1. I think I read fast enough, so likely I'm a fast reader
2. Fast reading is useful in situations when you need to find some information or understand a text content fast enough
3. I don't think so. It seems to me that I lack not a reading speed, but a concentration
4. I don't think that all books can be read quickly because there are some difficult to read books such as a technical or a philosophical literature.

p. 204, ex. 4

The speed of reading depends on what we are reading. The more the information difficult, the more time we need to understand it. So if we consider that a good student must be a quick study, then such a student would read fast too. But if we value only the final result in the form of a received knowledge, then a reading speed doesn't matter and may be slow. Perhaps, I choose the last version.